PREFACE

The present work was undertaken at the suggestion of Judge Samuel M. Wilson, the noted lawyer, historian and genealogist of Lexington, Kentucky.

The plan of the work, as originally conceived, was to compile an index merely of the names of all persons, as they appear in the five volumes of Littell's Laws of Kentucky. However, as the work progressed, it developed that identical names from time to time appeared in the series of enactments collected by Littell, which the context showed often referred to entirely different persons. It seemed desirable, therefore, in order to avoid confusion, to show further, in the index, as concisely as possible, the connection in which mention of any name is made.

As the volumes of Littell's Laws furnish a fair view and exposition of the early development of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, it has, likewise, seemed desirable to include, in addition to the names of individuals, an index of schools, newspapers, and corporations formed for public purposes, such as those for the opening of streams to navigation, the building of roads, and the like, and of corporations engaged in manufacturing enterprises. As showing the growth and trend of the tobacco industry, there is appended an index of all inspection sites established by law. Much more, not here specified, will be found covered by the contents of the present index.

With the hope that it will be of interest and value to historians as well as genealogists, and not without use to the members of the legal profession, this work is respectfully dedicated to my friend and counsellor, Judge Samuel M. Wilson.

INTRODUCTION

As set forth in the preface by the author, Mr. W. T. Smith, of the Lexington Bar, this Index to "The Statute Law of Kentucky," as compiled and edited by the Honorable William Littell and published in five volumes, between the years 1809 and 1819, and commonly called "Littell's Laws," is the result of a suggestion offered by the undersigned several years ago. The suggestion, perhaps, owed its origin to the fact that a similar index of "Personal Names in Henning's Statutes at Large of Virginia and Shepherd's Continuation" was prepared and published in 1896 by Joseph J. Casey, Esq., and that work had been frequently consulted and found most useful by the present writer. "Littell's Laws" bears much the same relation to the early history of Kentucky that "Henning's Statutes" bears to the early history of Virginia. To the student of history and genealogy, no less than to the student of law, both of these works are indispensable. Approximately 5,000 proper names will be found listed in this compilation. Frequently it will occur that some name or the act from which it is taken furnishes little more than a bare clue to the identity, family or other social or business relationships, or the history of the individual mentioned, but it is by the aid of such frail clues that the genealogist or historical inquirer is oftentimes enabled to pursue his quest to a successful conclusion. Speaking from long personal experience, we feel safe in saying that "Littell's Laws" constitute a veritable storehouse of genealogical and historical lore, to be found nowhere else in any publication of which we have knowledge. But such lore must remain a sealed record without a key to unlock its treasures. Fortunately, at the expenditure of much time and labor and despite serious handicaps, Mr. Smith has carried out his voluntary undertaking to an eminently satisfactory and successful termination. The tedious and exacting task thus faithfully performed deserves and, we trust, will receive a generous reward in the prompt recognition of the merit of the work and its hearty reception by all persons interested in exploring and elucidating the fascinating history of Kentucky during the period of its infancy. We commend without reserve the entire volume here presented.

SAMUEL M. WILSON.

Lexington, Kentucky, January 1, 1931.

WILLIAM LITTELL

William Littell, the compiler of "Littell's Laws of Kentucky," is believed to have been born in New Jersey, about the year 1780, and to have been a second-cousin of the founder of the Living Age. This relationship, however, has not been positively established. What seems to rest on a firmer foundation is the fact that he was a brother of Absalom Littell, of New Albany, Indiana, and it is probable that he came to Kentucky from Indiana about 1804. He was first educated for the ministry, but abandoned that calling, studied medicine and practiced for a short time in Mt. Sterling, Ky. He next turned his attention to the law, and, in consequence of his legal attainments, exhibited mainly in his painstaking work as a compiler and editor, the degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Transylvania University in 1810. Collins, the historian, states that "he was a lawyer of no special reputation except as a land lawyer, a laborious workman, [and] a constant student." His erudition and industry, however, were undeniable. His contributions to the early political history of Kentucky were valuable, but his fame rests chiefly on his law compilations.

Littell married, January 22, 1816, Martha (Irwin) McCracken, a sister of John M. C. Irwin, of Fayette County, and widow of Elijah McCracken. He was twice married but the name of his wife, by his first marriage, has not been ascertained. He died in Frankfort, Ky., September 26, 1824, survived by his widow and two sons, William, born of the first marriage, and Philander, born of the second. Both were minors and Littell's will named as their guardians two ministers, one of whom was the celebrated George T. Chapman of Lexington. He died in straitened circumstances, leaving practically all of his property to his son, William, with the result that the General Assembly, in January, 1825, passed a special act for the relief of the younger son, Philander. This act recited that the testator's "property was not enough to pay his debts, unless sold by a person who has the interest of his estate at heart, who may thus pay his debts, and save something for his infant son."

Littell was renowned for his eccentricities, and Collins states that he was for a "part of his life a man of bad morals." No sufficient evidence of this, however, has been discovered, and it is, perhaps, an overstatement.

In 1805, he entered into a contract with the Commonwealth to collect and publish the Statute Laws of Kentucky, in three volumes, afterwards extended to five. These appeared successively in 1809, '10, '11, '14, and '19. A list of his works, exclusive of writings contributed to the newspapers, is as follows:

Epistles of William, Surnamed Littell, 12mo., Frankfort, Ky., 1806; (satirical pieces in Biblical language and dialogue style).

Narrative of the Settlement of Kentucky, 12mo., Frankfort, 1806.

Political Transactions in and Concerning Kentucky, 8vo., Frankfort, 1806. (This was republished, with an Introduction by Temple Bodley, in 1926, under the auspices of the Filson Club.)

Principles of Law and Equity, Frankfort, 1808.

The Statute Law of Kentucky, in 5 vols., Frankfort, 1809-1819.

Festoons of Fancy, Consisting of Compositions Amatory, Sentimental and Humorous, in verse and prose, 12mo., Louisville, 1814. (The Epistles is sometimes found combined with the Festoons of Fancy.)

A Digest of the Statute Law of Kentucky, 2 vols. (in association with Jacob Swigert), Frankfort, 1822. (Annotated with citations of decisions by the Court of Appeals.)

Reports of Cases at Common Law and in Chancery, Decided by the Court of Appeals of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, in 5 vols., Frankfort, Ky., Vol. I, 1823, Vol. II, 1823, Vol. III, 1823, Vol. IV, 1824, Vol. V, 1824.

Cases Selected from the Decisions of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, Not heretofore Reported, Frankfort, 1824. (Commonly called "Littell's Selected Cases.")
